The Giants beat the Phillies at the Polo Grounds yesterday, gaining ground in the National League stretch, by the game wasn't won easily. There was a peck of trouble along the way, including a rally by the Phillies which put them ahead, and the necessity of the Giants' using their ninth inning. coming—that would mean a nimble brain, indeed—and the failure of two Philly base runners to hold their bases on an "infield fly" made the triple play possible. Probably all Young had in mind was a double play.

The whole thing hinged on the "infield fly." Leslie was on first base, Lee on second, nobody out; second inning. Smith hit a high fly to short right. Frisch went out for it, Young came in for it. Either could have handled it. If the ampire, under such circumstances, thinks such a ball can be handled by an infielder, he has the right to rule it an "infield fly," the batter then boing automatically out. "The batter's out!" shouted Klem, and he was loud about it, too. Young made as if to catch the ball, then let it fall to trapit. All the Quaker base runners had to do to protect themselves was to hold their bases; but the fact that Young handled the ball may have made them lose sight of its being an "infield fly," assuming that they heard Klem yell, which, according to that ump, they admitted they did.

Secretary Tierney of the Giants says the attendance at the Brooklyn double-header on Saturday was 38,000, and that 15,000 persons were turned away.

Too many umpires on the bases are giving their decisions too soon. Bill Klem, for one, doesn't do this. It's a treat to watch an artist such as Klem.

Fletcher tells of a slick trick worked on him in Boston by Larry Kopf. Trying to stretch a single and sliding. Fletcher's foot knocked the ball out of Kopf's hands at second. It rolled up under the latter's arm, but Kopf held his hands down on Fletcher as if the ball was in them. The umpire thought so and called Fletch out.

Take it from Curtis Walker, who plays out there and ought to know, it wouldn't be a bad idea to pad the right field wall at the Polo Grounds. Right fielders slamming into it after fly balls find it very hard.

DETROIT. Sept. 3.—The Detroit Tigers fielded in a spectacular manner behind Dauss to-day and celeated the St. Louis Browns, 4 to 3, in eleven innings, Rigney driving over the winning run with a single, after the Tigers had filled the bases.

Veach deprived the Browns of victory in the ninth, when he went to the foul line and took Foster's drive with his bare hand for the third out, with three St. Louis runners on bases.

The defeat put the Browns two games behind the league leading Yankees, but the margin is actually greater, inasmuch as the Browns have lost three games more than the Hugmen.

Robins' Heavy Hitting Brings Victory Over the Braves, 8 to 5

Jimmy Johnston and Tommy Griffith Lead Attack That Drives Oeschger From Mound in Seventhe Grimes Is Hit Rather Freely, but Goes the Route

Ever since they lost hopes of finishing in the money in the Nation League pennant race, some six weeks ago, the Robins have been trying hit the .500 mark, and they finally achieved this goal yesterday after by defeating the Braves, 8 to 5, in a Sunday game at Ehbets Fig. Robbie's athletes reached the 50-50 mark Saturday, but were progashoved down again when the Giants took the second gam

Burleigh Grimes was credited with defeating the Braves, but his team. mates had to bat at a terrific pace to keep the game safe for the spit baller. The Robins gathered twelve hits, including three extra-base blows, which were inserted where they would do the most damage. All the hits were needed, however, as the visitors kept pecking away at Grimes in a most menacing manner.

Joe Oeschger pitched three hitless innings and then crumpled up completely under the continued assault of the Brooklyn batsmen. The Robins were batting with all the viciousness that marked their attack against the Giants last week. They scored four runs on five hits in the fourth, two more on three safeties in the sixth and then a double and a triple speeded Oeschger to the showers in the seventh inning. A recruit named Gepee tossed right-handed curves to Uncle Robby's boys in the last two innings with fair success.

Johnston and Tommy Griffith were the batsmen who knocked Oeschger off the mound in the lucky seventh. They were a constant source of worry for Oeschger, Johnston leading the attack with a double and two singles, and Griffith getting a triple and a single. Incidentally these two collaborated in a double steal in the fourth inning, which started Brooklyn on the road to victory.

Four Runs for Robins

The Braves were enjoying a one-run lead when Johnston and Griffith started the assault in the fourth with singles. With Wheat at bat and Barbare playing in close for a bunt Johnston made a clean steal of third and simultaneously Griffith stole second. Wheat walked, filling the bases, after which Myers singled, High hit a sacrifice fly and Miller singled, accounting for four runs.

in the sixth Myers's single, High's triple and a wild pitch gave Brooklyn two more runs. The final tallies came in the seventh, as the result of comments on's double, Griffith's triple and Wheat's single, the last blow coming off Genee.

ston's double, Griffith's trige and Wheat's single, the last blow coming off Gepee.

The Braves scored their runs singly except in the eighth, when they tallied twice. In the third Johnston's two-base error on Ford, a sacrifice and Powell's safety brought in the first run. In the fifth Ford's triple and Oeschger's single accounted for another and Cruise's double and Barbare's single developed into the third run. Hits by Powell and Cruise and Roser's sacrifice fly sent home the Braves' final tallies in the eighth.

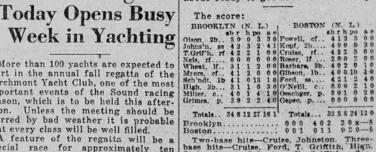

Two Triples by Each Team

Triples were numerous—High, Griffith, Cruise and Ford getting one each. Faster and more careful fielding might have cut down a few of these extrabase hits. Myers had his hands on Ford's blow, but the ball got away from him and Hy fell in running back for Cruise's three-bagger. High got his triple when Powell failed to make a shoestring catch.

The first two complete innings were played in the record time of twelve minutes. If such a pace were continued the game would have been over in fifty-one minutes.
